Reason For Selection	This is a car phone system used in the world's first cellular telephone service started in 1979. The wireless transceiver unit, weighing around 7 kg and with a volume of 6,600 cc, was installed in the trunk of the vehicle. It operated on the 800 MHz band, and consisted of a transmitter, power amplifier, receiver, synthesizer, signal distributor and controller. These components were integrated as a block which was then mounted in an aluminum die-cast box to provide protection against vibration and shock.
